Norman and I got to know each other through a religion and ethics discussion group at Quail Ridge Books in 1996. Our monthly meetings were made all the more interesting and lively by his comments and observations. Over the years he searched for the perfect church, and found it in St Paul's. We re-connected a few years ago, and my husband and I met him and Myrna for dinner occasionally. I loved his wry wit and honesty, and witnessed the great love he and Myrna had for each other. I will miss him. I wish his family peace as they move forward without his earthly presence.
